Play and Leisure

Children are spending more and more time indoors in front of the television and the computer screen. This hampers the development of their social, motor, and cognitive abilities, and does nothing to foster a creative approach to their physical environment and, hence, to themselves.

To counteract this trend, children need more outdoors spaces where they can play and explore their physical environments. Landscape architecture is able to create such spaces – for the child and adolescent as well as for the adult homo ludens.

Heute verbringen Kinder zunehmend mehr Zeit in Innenräumen, vor dem Fernseher und dem (Spiele-)Computer. Das hat negative Auswirkungen auf die Entwicklung ihrer sozialen, motorischen und kognitiven Fähigkeiten, ihren kreativen Umgang mit ihrer physischen Umwelt und ihren Bezug zur Natur und somit zu sich selbst.

Um dies zu kompensieren und hier entgegen zu wirken, sind physische Spielräume notwendig. Landschaftsarchitektur entwickelt Räume, die ein attraktives Angebot zur spielerischen Auseinandersetzung mit der physischen Umwelt darstellen. Wichtig sind auch Räume, die Bewegungsmöglichkeiten für Erwachsene bieten. Landschaftsarchitektur gestaltet auch die Räume für sportliche und Freizeitaktivitäten des erwachsenen homo ludens.
